Process efficiency – unique appearance. Legal Practice, Stuttgart (GER)

[Architecture | Project]

In 2008, architects mori:projects C Wald + M Phillips designed an 800 m², two-storey suite of offices for a legal practice extending above the roofs of Stuttgart. Their remit was to combine an investor's layout with the needs of a legal practice for the firm of Schaudt, Attorneys at Law, in order to create an interior design to enhance office process efficiency. As a result, not only were the entire floor plan, the colours and the materials individually aligned to the specific requirements of each office, the floor coverings were also selected in keeping with the needs and functions of each set of occupants. The unequivocal character of the meeting areas and the warm atmosphere in the office and conference rooms serve to create a pleasant and relaxed ambience. Flexible space utilisation has been ensured through the incorporation of a MOVEO partition from DORMA Hüppe. It allows room sizes to be adapted quickly and easily to prevailing requirements, keeping the layout ever flexible and efficiently multi-functional. Open and enclosed zones alternate, with even the corridors individually designed as fully-fledged rooms in their own right. Linked into them are the secretariats, library and the waiting areas. In the more "sensitive" zones the integral acoustic ceiling has been complemented by wall-to-wall carpeting with floral motifs. From four different patterns and four directions of flow have been created 16 distinct tiling arrangements, giving rise to an all-encompassing configuration with intricate ebbs and flows, twists and turns to define the calmer and the more dynamic zones.

Project | interior

The offices and conference rooms benefit from the flexible space management capability available with the MOVEO operable partition with its full-face panelling, a solution made for quick and easy room size modification.

Open and enclosed zones alternate, with the corridors designed with vivacious detail serving as fully fledged rooms in their own right.

High-quality lever handles from DORMA underline and enhance the sophistication of the interior design.
